'I was sent by my lord (l.p.h.!), the king of Upper and Lower Egypt Nebtawire to establish his monument in this land. He chose me from his city, after I had been honoured before his courtiers.

His Majesty commanded that an expedition went with me to this august land, men from the pick of the entire land. Stonemasons, artisans, officials, sculptors, drawers, metalworkers, goldsmiths, seal-keepers of the palace.\footnote{Suggested by Faulkner (1962).}

Every treasure of the treasury and every office of the palace were united behind me.

I traversed land as if it were river and upper valleys as if they were waterways.

I brought him a sarcophagus, an eternal memorial that endures forever.

Never descended something like it from this land since the time of the god.

The expedition descended without loss, not a man perished, not a soldier retreated, not a donkey died, there was no injury to an artisan. It happened to the majesty of my lord as the destiny that Min created for him, because he loved him so much, so that his spirit might endure on the Great Throne in the kingdom of the two banks of Horus. He made it something greater than itself.

I am his favorite servant, who does everything that he praises, every day.'\footnote{Read as .}
