Bibliography
Year 2, second month of the Season of Inundation, day 15, under the majesty of Horus: Mighty bull, beloved of Maat; Two Ladies: Shining as a flame, great of strength; Gold Horus: Perfect of years, who enlivens the hearts; The king of Upper and Lower Egypt: Aakheperkare, given life; Son of Re: Tuthmosis, forever! [...] his introduction. His appearance as chief of the Two Lands to rule what the sun revolves around, the southern and the northern lands as well, the shares of Horus and Seth, the union of the two lands, as he sat on the thrones of Geb, and the double crown was raised.
As His Majesty took possession of his inheritance, he sat down on the dais of Horus, to widen the borders of Thebes

Roughly this appearance, but a different sign is meant.

and the fields of Khef-her-nebes, to enslave to her the bedouin, the hill dwellers, those abominated by god, the inhabitants of the Aegean Sea,

It is unclear what this group depicts.

and northerners are going south, all foreign lands together carrying their gifts to the good god of the primordial time, Aakheperkare (may he live forever!).

Horus, lord of the Two Lands, is victorious. Tied to him were [???] the chiefs, their villages to him, kissing the ground.

The ḫnwjtjw people are dancing in homage to His Majesty, bowing to his uraeus. After he had overthrown the chief of the Nubians,

May not be the correct sign. The meaning of the word is unclear as well.

After he had brought together the borders of its two sides, no losses occurred to the evil ones who had come to its aid.

Ne Not one thereof remained. When the Troglytes fell to terror,

Ne and were thrown aside throughout their lands, their skulls flooded their valleys,

Ne and their mouths were painted as pouring rain.

Ne Birds of pray above this were numerous,

Ne and these birds were snatching and taking somewhere else.

Ne The crocodile threw himself on the fleeing.

Ne He who hides himself from Horus with powerful arm

Ne is subject to what the Unique One will do, son of Amun, begotten by the god with the secret name, offspring of the bull of the Ennead, excellent image of the divine body,

who does what the souls of Heliopolis praise, who was fashioned by the lords of the Great House, a fortress for his entire army,

who confronts the assembled Nine Bows like a young panther at a resting herd after the might of His Majesty has blinded them, who reaches the limits of the entire earth,

who treads its ends with victorious strength seeking battle,

finding none who would defy him.

He opens valleys unknown to the ancestors, and unseen by the bearers of the Two Ladies.

His southern boundary reaches to the beginning of this land, his northern to that reversed water flowing south.

Such has not happened to other kings.
His name has reached the circumference of heaven, and it has reached the end of the earth. One swears by him in all lands, because of the greatness of the might of His Majesty. Such has never been seen in the annals of the previous kings since the Followers of Horus: he who gives his breath to one who follows him, and his great offering to one who is loyal to him. Now, His Majesty is Horus, who took possession of his kingship of millions of years. Subservient to him are the islands of the ocean, and the entire land is under his feet,
